Programme Notes: Cardiff Blues v Munster, Friday 21st September 2018

If only games were 70 minutes long....

After losing 3 games by a total of 5 points the Blues are entertaining and frustrating in equal measure, the current total of 4 points is a poor reward for the attacking rugby played in all 3 games, but poor defence and the inability to see a game out at the death is costing us dearly. At times we seem to be unstoppable, cutting through teams at will and finishing chances with ease and then we drop out of games and give up soft scores.

With 2 home games against Munster and Cheetahs followed by a derby against the Dragons at Rodney Parade we really need 3 wins to get ourselves back on track in the PRO14 before the Heineken Cup starts. If we can play for 80 minutes and not let teams back into games we have "won" then we can look forward to a reasonable first season under John Mulvihill and the new coaching team.

Munster come to the Arms Park with 2 big home wins against a struggling Cheetahs team and a depleted Ospreys team, but they struggled away to Glasgow and never recovered from a poor first half performance. The Blues need to finish this game as strongly as they have started the last three and a big, loud crowd can only help.
